Dehydrated Products Available to Institutions

Because Government requirements for dehydrated carrots and sweet potatoes are smaller than was anticipated, these products will be available for civilian use during the coming year. Food Distribution Order 30, which reserves dehydrated vegetables for war needs, has been amended to permit sale of dried carrots and sweet potatoes to civilian users. While the total amount available probably will not be great enough to warrant general distribution through retail channels, institutions such as hospitals, hotels, and restaurants are encouraged to use these two products. Such institutions can well utilize these dehydrated foods to augment their rations of other processed foods.

Later in the year, if supplies of other dehydrated vegetables become available in excess of Government requirements, they may also be released for sale to civilians.

Attached is a list of processors equipped to dehydrate carrots and sweet potatoes. Though sweet potato dehydration plants will not be in operation until fall, institutions are urged to get their orders in to dehydrators as soon as possible to aid in scheduling plant operations.
